DIRTY BEARS

Prior to the November 5th Green Bay-Chicago game, Packer Marcia made a wager with Phil Burdick, a Chicago native/resident who works as a reporter for WGN-TV in the Windy City. After the Bears lost 35-28, Marcia received her winnings along with a letter and a news clipping from the November 14th Chicago Tribune.

Hello from Chicago!

O.K., so the Bears stink! So does the Chicago River, but we still love it, we just don't eat the fish.

Speaking of foul, check out the newspaper article.. don't let this happen to you, on ye zealous Packer-backer.

Enclosed is a Bears hat to pay off the bet Marcia and I made. I wish the Bears would have won. I was really looking forward to wearing rats ears (oh, excuse me, a Mickey Mouse hat).

Losing to Packers again and again has everyone in Chicago totally bummed out. Muggers now give up too easily, drive-by shootings aren't very accurate, and when someone offers a city official a bribe, they just say "no thanks, just doing a good job for the the hard-working taxpayers of Chicago is reward enough."

It's really weird around here. I don't like it.

In the old days, it was tar and feathers

Several Bears football fans reportedly took out their anger over the Sunday loss to the Green Bay Packers by duct-taping a Packers fan to a stop sign.

The unidentified man was forcibly removed from Casey's Cabin Tavern on Ill. Hwy. 173 in Fox Lake by the Bears fans and taped to the sign along with a placard above his head that read "Packers Fan," according to police records.

Police said the man apparently was "dogging" the Bears fans about the Packers' victory, and that the man, who was cut loose from the signpost by a police officer, did not wish to sign a complaint.

A REGGIE WHITE CHRISTMAS

Just hours after a press release went out saying the NFL's all-time sack-leader would be lost for the season due to hamstring surgery, Reggie White is back. Reggie, an ordained minister, has credited his deep faith in God for helping heal football injuries. (Maybe that's how Brett Favre recovered so fast from his ankle injury.) Reggie's "laying on of hands" could keep his team-mates healthy ("Heal!") while also keep opposing quarterbacks in the grass (Kneel!). Therapy varies from team to team. Here's a photo of Bears tackle Jim Flanigan trying to get the kinks out of his neck... ouch. What a bone-head.
